

eXtyles Font Audit

The following table lists fonts that are explicitly supported by eXtyles. Note that when fonts have Bold or Italic variants, those faces are also supported.

The following table lists fonts that are not yet supported by eXtyles. This table is not all-inclusive – it is merely a table of those special character fonts of which we are aware, but we have not built tables to support them.

Note that in some cases, you will see “????” as the name of a font. This usually happens when an author has used MS Mincho or PmingLiU, and Font Audit has been run on a Windows 95, 98, or ME system. You should be alert for special character problems in this situation, but usually none are reported.

† "Adv" fonts are used by Advent 3B2 in composition. It is likely that their appearance in Word files occurs when authors have copied and pasted content from published PDFs typeset in 3B2. AdvTimes and AdvPSTim are regular character mappings and are supported by eXtyles. We are not familiar with the character mappings of other Adv fonts. Likely their use will not result in character loss, but diligence should be used when they appear in Font Audit.
